

BERGEN RACING LATEST... INDY MILE

The past few weeks since Springfield have been nuts. Working on bikes a lot and doing some flying. I've been home to see the family back in Fresno, Ca. Matter of fact I'm in an airport as I write this.....ha, ha. Sorry in taking so long on getting an update out but have I've had some computer problems lately. That said, below is my report from the Indy Mile, Springfield short track and Springfield Mile will be coming soon.

LATEST:

The Indy mile was such a huge event last year and this year was another one just the same with Kenny Roberts and Ben Bostrom riding the A&A Tuned Yamaha TZ750. It was really cool. I was having a lot of trouble at the start of the night and needed up I qualifying 39th. I just couldn't get the motorcycle to do what I wanted. The Reimans, National Cycle, Eric Snedeker, Digger Helm mechanics made every change in history to try and get me up front and it was a struggle. I ended up going out in my heat race got a great start from the third row and ran in 12th place. Amazingly the bike was like a new bike and I was able to move my way past eight guys and score a 4th place finish in my heat and a direct transfer to the Main event.

The Indy main is very difficult track to race on because of the dirt. Vision is a big part of the puzzle as the track is really hard to see due to the lighting and the fact that the dirt won't wipe off your face shield. So I stacked some tear offs on and considered myself ready for the main. I missed a gear off the line and moved right to the back of the pack. But was able to move forward thru the pack and ended up pulling a top 10 finish outnot too bad for qualifying 39th overall.
